Three out of every four instructors say, "More people read MISTIC in Humanities than any other class."

Did you appreciate the clear look of the print now that those little lines between letters are gone? The reason is new matrices (mats, that is) for the linotype. We would mention the dictionary definition of matrix, only it would probably be censored as indecent.

THOUGHTS WHILE PROOFREADING... Oops, no proofreading.

We aren't the only paper with proofing errors, though. This is from the Washington, D.C., Howard University HILLTOP:

"The University choir, two year winner of the Student Council plague for being the most outstanding student organization on the campus..." Sickening, isn't it!

Teachers who snort contemptuously upon hearing student gripes against their curricula and methods are referred to Psychology and the New Education, by Pressey and Robinson (Among the best educational psychologists—Dr. Christensen), page 387:

"The dissatisfaction (among college students) is also due in no small measure to perfunctory teaching... Not to be dismissed lightly are the chronic student complaints in both high school and college, and the student protest literature (the critical, abusive, or satirical material chronic in student papers and magazines.)"

Mid-term time always brings on an epidemic of that strange oriental malady, the wandering gaze. Those who are not prepared for exams seem to be most frequently attacked. Our vice president in charge of research on strange oriental maladies says that the only known cure is the palm-leaf paper method to be used by anybody near the one afflicted.

"Eisenhower may be out of the GGP race," says Marion Haukebo, "but they shouldn't underestimate General Darkless MacHorse."

Last week was placed here without comment this note:

"Some students were grateful that study was possible in the library the night of the Concordia game."

We heard much speculation about its meaning: Basketball men were peeved that anyone would think of studying during a game. Prominent WAA members thought it meant when they are gone is the only time the library is quiet enough for study (twinge of conscience?). Scholars thought it veiled sarcasm about not attending the game.

The truth will out—there was no barb. In fact I wasn't at either place, but someone told me he was glad the library had remained open; it was an only chance to study, and, he said, "the library usually closes at the slightest provocation."

Faculty Hears

Intergroup Relations Report

The college study in Intergroup Relations will be the topic of discussion at a faculty dinner meeting to be held in the Student Center tonight at 6 p. m. Dr. Joseph Kise will speak on the community aspect of the project, pointing out methods to be used in decreasing discrimination against minority groups.

Dr. A. M. Christensen, chairman of the whole project at MSTC, will explain the results of the testing members will report on progress to which took place in the cooperating schools. Other students and faculty date and plans for the rest of the year.

MSTC has taken part in this national study since 1945, the second year of a four-year program, and this year is one of ten colleges participating.

The aim of the study is to determine, by testing and other means, the effect of concentrated education in the field of intergroup relations.

Projects for emphasis in this year's program are testing, curriculum, extra-curricular activities, special activities, the laboratory schools, community experiences for selected groups, and public relations.

The activity projects deal with college students directly, insofar as they will attempt to improve relationships between students through cooperative activities in their college life.

Mrs. Jessie Steele and Miss Viola Petrie are co-chairmen of the committee in the laboratory schools. Only the sixth and twelfth grades will be used for experimental purposes, but the entire enrollment is included in the program.

MSTC Activities Prove Progress Real

In an educational institution it seems logical that the student body should be concerned with general progress in man's evolution. Today, with education striving to keep one jump ahead of chaos promised by A bomb warfare, let's look around us objectively to ascertain whether our progress is evident.

At least once each week the bulletin board demands our attention with a colorful sign offering the exercise of our right to worship as we wish by participating in activities sponsored by one of the religious groups on the campus. How many years ago would such tolerance of each other be unheard of?

Last year, after waiting since 1941 when fire destroyed Mildew hall, the college marshalled every effort and was able to obtain the allocation for a men's dormitory to house students who until now were forced to room where and how they could.

During the past few years some agitation has been stirring for adequate facilities to accommodate smokers on our campus. This agitation has become an active campaign and the desired renovations will soon be effected.

Don Layton in his column "It's Like This," this week recommends that something be done to provide a case for the trophies that have been and will be acquired by this college.

These things show progress of a substantial and lasting nature. They promise that the horizons of tomorrow will not forever remain a dream if we cling to our belief in people and our progress, and preserve in every-day ways our way of life.

Faculty Contributes To Overseas Relief

Thirty-two members of the Moorhead State Teachers college faculty and clerical staff have contributed $34.50 to the Overseas Teachers-Relief fund conducted by the NEA.

On January 12 more than $160,000 had been received for the Overseas Teachers-Relief fund from the teachers of America, according to the NEA news for January 16.

The money is used to provide food and clothing packages through CARE (Committee on American Remittances to Europe).

Hawley John McDonald Accepts Teaching Position At Ortonville

Black John, Hawley John, known to the front office as John Curtis McDonald, left MSTC Friday night to accept a position teaching mathematics in the high school at Ortonville.

His departure will eliminate the difficulty of having two John McDonalds here and will end the necessity of the nickname used to distinguish between them.

John presided over four organizations during his stay here, the New man club, the M club, the junior class, and the Student Commission.

Extending his activities into many departments, John took a leading role in Ever Since Eve, freshman man play in 1942, played in the band, and sang in the mixed chorus and the men's chorus.

His athletic activities include three years of varsity football, one year with the college baseball nine, and intramural basketball.

He was also a member of the MISTIC staff, having written a sports column called Training-Table Talks. The faculty picked him for Who's Who this year.

Veteran of three theaters of operations, the Pacific, the Mediterranean, and the European, where he served with the Corps of Engineers, John has been living at Dragon Terrace with his wife Gretchen, and son John junior.

What's Wrong With Me?

Why don't they speak to me? I haven't got hydrophobia or house maids knee!

Of all the snobbish people in the world, this is the worst display of it I've seen yet. One minute they're all nice and sweet and now this. They totally ignore me!

I must have grown overly repulsive overnight—but wait—You say there's an explanation? I won't die knowing that everyone hates me?

Oh, I get it now. To a sorority rushee this period is called 'silence'.

Wherein no actives may speak to a rushee?

But, how utterly awful. 'Who will I get to sign my name in choir, loan me some gum, and worse yet, pass the salt and pour me a glass of water at meals.'

What's that? It's over at noon today? Thank heaven. 'No longer will I be a social outcast, given icy stares with no word of explanation. Oh yes, 'silence' will soon be over—and then on to initiation.'

Reporter Digs Out Startling Facts On Lower Slobbovian Campus Condition

Have you wondered why the halls are dirty, why the walks are covered with snow, why you fall and nearly break your neck? And have the teachers wondered why students are tardy or never even make it to class? The reason is clear: the one-way lane from Weld to MacLean is a long, narrow walk, and many have fallen along the way. As for the class in Humanities, it's only by an act of Providence and the fact that fox-hole dwellers have a yen to leave the place once in a while that has beaten a little path around the northwest corner of the Campus school.

Being logical, some of us want to place the guilt on the shoulders of someone, anyone. In the process, everyone said "the janitor," but that couldn't be right. So Mr. Selden was interviewed. Rather sorrowfully he told the true facts of the situation: "No one wants to work." One of the janitors is gone and someone is needed to take his place. Mr. Selden's list of people wanting work is long; it seems everyone wants a part time job, but no one wants to clear his own way to class, slowly and surely, while being paid for it, even at the increased wage of sixty cents an hour. They seem to think the whole job will be shoveling. But why not shovel? The Man with the Hoe is a work of art, what's wrong with the Man with a Shovel? On some it would look very nice.

The way things are, the drifts will soon cover the trash containers (where the smokers are so careful to put their cigarette butts), and the dormitories will be isolated from the world, except for the telephone, that little gadget over which you ask a girl for a date. But the way things stand, what good's a date without skis?

Stokkeland: Second Installment

Norwegian Colleges Compared to American System

(This is the second in a series of three installments on the Norwegian school system, written by Svein Stokkeland of Kleppe parish, Stavanger, Norway. In last week's issue, Mr. Stokkeland reviewed the evolution of the Norwegian school system and contrasted it with the American curriculum.)

All Norwegian high schools and colleges offer the same courses. Both in the elementary (primary) schools and in the secondary schools the "activity school" principles have been adopted.

A Norwegian "college" can best be compared to an American junior college, and a student with no more than a Norwegian college education is usually rated a junior at American colleges and universities. Our junior colleges offer no summer courses, and many students are able to work their way through college.

During the first two years at a five-grade combined high school-junior college, English, German, mathematics, and Norwegian are greatly stressed. From the third year and on, the student has a somewhat limited choice of subjects. He may choose one of the following combinations for his written examination: Latin, old Norse, Norwegian, mathematics, (German and old Norse stressed); mathematics, physics, English, Norwegian, (mathematics and physics stressed); and English, Norwegian, German, mathematics, (English stressed.)

Oral tests are given in French (required for all students), history, biology, economics, and Norwegian government. Marks in these subjects are also given at each class recitation.

There are also many commercial junior colleges, navigation schools, technical schools, boarding schools for adults, agricultural schools, schools for defectives, and reformatory schools. In the country there is a kind of school for adults with six-month courses, attended by youths at the age of 14-16. A bill has been passed in the Norwegian parliament making such schools compulsory for youngsters leaving the seventh grade, provided the local authorities approve of it.

To operate the elementary and secondary schools successfully, a number of teachers are needed. Teachers for the elementary schools are educated at 4-year normal schools (seminaries). Applicants are admitted after an examination, and no specific education is required for entrance. Most applicants are high school graduates, however, or have gone through several courses for adults, or have acquired the prescribed knowledge by independent study. There are also two-year courses for junior college graduates wanting to take up teaching as a career.

Certain normal schools offer a two-year course for teachers of English in the two top grades in the elementary school. These courses are for college graduates only. There are also numerous summer courses for elementary school teachers.

Teachers in high schools and junior colleges must, as a rule, be graduated from the University of Oslo. This university has facilities for law, economics, theology, (languages and literature), history, geography, mathematics, natural sciences, and pharmacy. The Technical College is located at Trondheim; and at As, near Oslo, the agricultural college has been established. The Dental College and the Veterinary College are both in Oslo, but the Commercial College is situated at Bergen.

All junior college graduates contemplating study at the University have to take a course in general psychology, philosophy, and logic. A future teacher of languages, history, or geography has to take up Latin, if he has not studied that subject at college. The language student must also take up general phonetics and the history of the development of languages. These courses cover an academic year.

(The concluding installment in Svein Stokkeland's series will appear in the February 10 issue of the MISTIC.)

Dragons Split Two Loop Tilts, Meet Beavers, Huskies Here

Play Bemidji Friday, St. Cloud Monday

The Dragons face a crucial test in conference play this coming week as they play host to the Bemidji Beavers on Friday, Feb. 6, and the St. Cloud Huskies on Monday, Feb. 9.

The Bemidji cagers, who gave the Dragons a bad time last year have 16 lettermen back, so they should be a pretty formidable aggregation.

They have a 62-47 victory over Duluth on the credit side of the ledger, but that was before Duluth had Rudy Monsen. Duluth came back later to beat Bemidji.

The Huskies, who grabbed an early lead in the conference, have one win over the Dragons to their credit already. The Dragons, out for revenge and playing on the home hardwood, (which in their case seems to be a big factor), are all set to show the Huskies that what happened at the Granite City was a mistake.

Forward John Kne seems to be the man to stop on the Huskie quintet.

Asks Renewed Action On Tennis Court Issue

The other day sportswriter Jerry Kranz asked what had happened to the petition for tennis courts circulated around MSTC last fall. This is his answer.

Some time ago I took it on myself to stir life into the tennis-minded students and faculty. I began my campaign by circulating petitions and visiting various people of influence (I thought.)

Enthusiasm seemed abundant. This was proven by 250 signatures on my petitions. I thought I had something; but after being led in circles and given a general run around, I knew my efforts were in vain.

Why can't MSTC have decent tennis courts instead of their present mud-packed thistle patches? Why can't the entire body of tennis-minded students be given a decent break?

B-Teams Take Two From Independents

The Junior Dragons—or Dragon B's—coached by Oats LeGrand have been divided into two teams, the sophomores and freshmen, and have been playing Moorhead Independent League teams during the past week.

Last Tuesday, January 27, the soph's took on the Rex Cafe aggregation and the frosh tangled with American Legion. The team with the most points scored against their opponents were to have the honor of playing Red River Hardware, MIL defending champs, the following Thursday, the other team was to play KVOX.

Each team managed to rack up 91 points, so the best defensive team was picked. Rex had scored only 35 points against the soph's, whereas the Legion piled up 51 against the frosh. This pitted the soph's against RRH and the frosh against KVOX.

In the frosh-KVOX game, the yearlings were never threatened. They piled up a commanding lead and then proceeded to try to break their record of 91 points. The radiomen had different ideas though, and the final score was 84-44.

The soph-RRH game was a different story. It was a nip and tuck battle all the way, with the Hardwaremen finally overcoming the soph's 69-53.

Jack McDonald Has Operation

John F. (Jack) McDonald, brother of basketball captain Jim, is convalescing at St. Mary's hospital in Rochester after a very serious spinal operation which took place Thursday, Jan. 29.

Jim went to Rochester last week to be with his brother during the operation. He met the basketball team at Minneapolis and played in the Mankato and Winona games over the weekend.

Mankato 59-Dragons 52

The Mankato Indians scalped the Dragons 59-52 in a game played on the Redskin's home court last night. This loss gives the Domek-men a 2-2 record in conference play.

Dragons 60-Winona 55

Captain Jim McDonald led the Dragon cagers to a 60-55 victory over Winona Teachers last Saturday, when he scored 19 counters to top scorers of both teams. Mac had 9 field goals and only one gift toss.

The Dragons, who had a slim 31-30 lead at halftime, had plenty of trouble with last place Winona. The MS cagers dropped only six gift shots.

Kirby Is Champ Of Middleweights At District Match

By virtue of two KO's and one TKO, MSTC's Ray "Kirby" Kuklenski won the middleweight title in the district Golden Gloves meet held at Wahpeton last week.

In the first round, Kuklenski, TKO'd Glen Sanders of Ellendale Normal in 1:07 of the third round. The semifinals found Ray making short work of Wallace Bakke of Morris, by knocking him out in just 0:37 of the first round.

In the finals, Kuklenski battered Walt Pankow of Wahpeton for two rounds before sending him to the canvas for the count with only 24 seconds gone of the third.

Kuklenski will be entered in the Upper Midwest Golden Gloves tournament to be held in Minneapolis, Feb. 9. Last year Ray reached the semifinals of the light heavy weight class in the same tournament.

It's Like This

By Don "Shorty" Layton

The varsity basketball squad left on a long trip Thursday to tackle two conference foes: Winona on Saturday and Mankato on Monday. These two games played on the road—and a traveling team is always at a disadvantage—could make or break the Dragons in the conference; but the games here this coming week will mean even more.

Little Joe Gotta has really been hitting the hoop lately to help the Dragons come through with their victories over Concordia and Mayville. That isn't all Joe has been hitting; he also hit the top of the honor roll with an A average.

If you have been reading the sports page of late, several articles have appeared "by Krunch." For the few who do not know, this is Jerry Kranz from Frazee. He did his part in helping the Dragons gridders tie for the conference championship.

For several days Ray "Kerby" Kuklenski has been the topic of conversation. Yes, Kirby came through again this year, but not as a light-heavy weight; he ate less this year and worked down to the middleweight class. But the Golden Gloves isn't the only goal Kirby is working for; after he wins at Minneapolis, Chicago, and New York, he says the Olympics and an international championship are within his reach.

Hockey is a sport which has aroused little interest around MS-TC since the last Dragon puck team was active 15 years ago. Teams have been started this year at Concordia and NDAC. There has been talk of the Dragons starting a team, with the proposed hockey rink inside the tennis courts. Only boards would have to be put up, and a fine rink would be made. Another point is that the cost of hockey equipment is very high. Anyone wishing to donate about fifty thousand for this cause would be appreciated.

Four Teams Still Unbeaten In Third Round Intramurals

With the third round nearing completion, there are still four unbeaten teams in intramural play.

The Krunchers are still holding out, but they seem to have an inside track with Lady Luck—must be Mongoven. They have won one game by three points, on a gift basket—wrong-way Unruh—one game on a fresh pass that turned into a basket; and more recently, an overtime game. They meet the supreme test in the fifth round, when they play the well-balanced, unbeaten Hoosier Hotshots.

Hansmann (Hooster H.) is leading the individual scorers with 68 points in four games. Right behind him is Alvey Lund (Krunchers) with 60 points in three games.
